

KEY NextGen: Call for Contributions

KEY will start publishing periodical reports with the overarching theme of Transformation and we would like you to contribute! The reports will be published on the Website and over LinkedIn, and will be part of a NextGen initiative to engage students and young professionals in KEY's publishing activities.

What are we looking for?

If you would like to contribute as an author, you can propose a topic for a journalistic/analytical piece that you would like to write. Current KEY working groups are on Healthcare and Biotech, Digital Transformation, Sustainability and Soft Power. You are free to suggest any related topic that you have expertise or interest in, but keep in mind the overarching theme of Transformation, and it should:

- Be related to critical issues
- Relate to cross fertilization between Europe & Korea
- Focus on concrete initiatives

What is the format?

We are looking to publish short reports in a series related to "Transformation". The piece could be an interview, a position paper or research paper. If you would like to co-author a piece, you can write it together with others.

How do I join?

Please write an e-mail to info@key-society.com, outlining the topic you want to write about, and the format you envision. We will then discuss the next steps with you, give feedback regarding the topic and format, and decide on deadlines for the first draft.

Our supervisory pool includes professors, industry professionals and journalists.

If you have any questions, please reach out anytime. Feel free to forward this call for contributions to anyone else who could be interested in contributing to this NextGen initiative.
